Musical Notes

If anything, this past year has been freaky. Just as we opened our 2020 musical last spring we were sent home for a two-week hiatus while some virus called COVID 19 blew over. We thought we would be back in a couple of weeks.

A year has passed, and here we are getting ready to present Bellarmine's annual Spring musical. We auditioned on Zoom; we rehearsed in masks, socially-distanced, and tried to figure out how to create a live performance with a cast and crew of nearly 40 students, when for the first month we couldn't gather in groups of more than six.

The virus and the ensuing global pandemic fractured our lives and sent us in different directions, yet it also helped us see the importance of connections and community. This whacky and poignant story of a family struggling with loss and forced to look at the world from another's perspective has turned out to be just the right choice for an unprecedented year.

We hope you will see this performance – rehearsed and recorded in a way that none of us had ever really considered before – as our gift to our Bellarmine community.

We got this.
